Sarat Chandra Chattopadhyay

Sarat Chandra Chattopadhyay was a Bengali novelist and short story writer of early 20th century.

Because his father was unable to maintain steady employment during his youth, Sarat Chandra grew up poor and received very little formal education. Despite his troubled childhood, however, he adopted his father's love of literature. Sarat Chandra started writing in his early teens and grew to be a prolific writer, writing several novels, novellas, and short stories. He began to establish himself professionally at a time when the national movement was gaining momentum in India and the country was experiencing a general awakening of social consciousness. This fact is elegantly communicated in his work. Much of Sarat Chandra's writing bears the mark of the turbulent society that surrounded him. He used his powerful gift of writing to depict the spirit of the time, to inspire social and political reform, and to ultimately captivate the hearts and minds of thousands of readers not only in Bengal but all over India.
