Treat her Right (Treats to Tempt You Book 2) By Serenity Woods

Maisey does her best to resist the best-looking guy in the whole of New Zealand. But when the chocolate starts to melt on Joss's warm body, it seems only polite to offer to lick it off... And that's where the problems start.

Treats to Tempt You Book 2.

A friends-to-lovers sexy romance.

Maisey Graham's desperate to devise a new advertising campaign for her confectionery shop, Treats to Tempt You. The youngest of her group of friends, she's determined to prove she's not as ditzy and inept as they all seem to think she is. After witnessing her brother's gorgeous best mate, local GP Joss Heaven, working out at the gym, Maisey has an idea: photographs of sexy guys eating chocolate truffles.

Joss isn't keen on taking part. He has far too much on his plate with his demanding job and family problems. And the thought of everyone in town staring at pictures of his chocolate-covered crown jewels doesn't appeal either. Plus, her brother has threatened to kill him if he so much as kisses Maisey. But the crackpot chocolatier is surprisingly persuasive.

Maisey does her best to resist the best-looking guy in the whole of New Zealand. But when the chocolate starts to melt on Joss's warm body, it seems only polite to offer to lick it off... And that's where the problems start.

Warning: contains enough laughter and loving to keep you up all night. Chocoholics beware—this story will make you want to lick melted chocolate off the nearest good looking guy.

Editorial Review

From the Inside Flap

"Fancy taking me to heaven and back again?" Maisey asked. She held her breath while she waited for Joss to react. He was staring at her, but she couldn't tell what he was thinking.

If he looked alarmed, or if he said no, she'd laugh and say she was joking, and hopefully make a quick getaway. She shouldn't have mentioned it. Last time, she'd said no strings and no commitment, and presumably he'd agreed to sleep with her because of that caveat. She hadn't meant to mention it again--she truly had thought it would be a one-off.

But he looked so gorgeous sitting there in the sun, a little sleepy, long legs stretched out in front of him as he lounged back in his chair. She'd started thinking how nice it would be to lean across and kiss him. His lips would be warm from the sun, and he'd slip his hand behind her head to hold her there while his tongue explored her mouth. That had caused something to stir inside her, and the invitation had tumbled from her lips.

He was still staring at her, and she had the feeling he was weighing up the decision in his head. She understood. If they had sex again, it was more than a one-night stand. It wasn't a relationship by any means, but whereas they could put what had happened before down to post-party buzz, this time it would be pre-meditated, considered, and thought through.

Her heart raced, and she swallowed down the nervous lump in her throat. He was going to say no. Shit. She opened her mouth to say she'd only been joking.

And then his lips curved up.

She stopped, mouth still open, and watched as his smile spread and became sexy and playful, his eyes dancing.

"Hell, yeah," he said.

Relief and joy flooded her, and she gave a thankful laugh that she hadn't embarrassed herself.

Joss grinned, and then to her surprise, he pulled the arm of her chair toward him. As she reached his side, he leaned across and lifted her onto his lap as easily as if she were a child.

"Ooh," she said, slightly out of breath.

"Maisey the Minx." He slid his arms around her.

She put her arms around his neck and leaned down until her lips brushed his. "You like making up nicknames for me, don't you?"

"I do," he murmured. He leaned his head on the back of the chair and let her trail her lips from the corner of his mouth over his cheek to his ear. He closed his eyes. "Maisey Mischief."

She chuckled and kissed around his ear, took the lobe in her mouth, and sucked it.

He shivered. "Mouthwatering Maisey."

"I like that one." She kissed down his jaw and back to his mouth, then ran her tongue lightly across his bottom lip.

He gave a deep, approving growl. "You realize you're the most tempting treat in your shop?"

She rubbed her nose against his. "That's a nice thing to say."

"I mean it." As she had hoped he would, he moved a hand to hold the back of her head and keep her in place. "You drive me crazy, Maisey," he whispered, and then he pulled her head down to his and kissed her.

The warm sun beat down on them, and his body felt hot against hers through his shirt. When she brought up a hand to touch his cheek, his skin was slightly damp, his hair curling around his ears and the back of his neck. The honey-like smell of the manuka trees rose to wrap around them, and all she could hear was the lap of the waves on the beach far below and the call of the tuis above them.

Joss tasted warm and sweet as the early autumn day, and everything felt lazy and relaxed and unhurried, as if they had weeks to explore each other, as if the world had stopped turning and the sun was going to stay high and hot and humid forever. She tipped her head to change the angle of the kiss, and he murmured his approval and slid his tongue against hers, tasting her, sending all the hairs rising on her arms and the back of her neck.

She could have sat there for hours just kissing him, but his hands dropped to her hips and he shifted beneath her. Before she could prepare herself, he rose to his feet, wrapping her legs around his waist. She gasped and held him tightly, and he laughed and turned to walk through the large glass doors into the house.

About the Author

Serenity Woods lives in the sub-tropical Northland of New Zealand with her wonderful husband and gorgeous teenage son. She writes hot and sultry contemporary romances, and is a member of the Romance Writers of New Zealand. Writing as Freya Robertson, she won the national NZ Sir Julius Vogel Award for Best Novel for her epic fantasy. She would much rather immerse herself in reading or writing romance than do the dusting and ironing, which is why it's not a great idea to pop round if you have any allergies.
