The Roses in My Carpets By Rukhsana Khan

For a young refugee living with loss and terror-filled memories, time is measured by the next bucket of water, the next portion of bread, and the next call to prayer. Here, where everything - walls, floor, courtyard - is mud, a boy's heart can still long for freedom, independence, and safety. And here, where life is terribly fragile, the strength to endure grows out of need. But the strength to dreams comes from within.

Editorial Review

From Publishers Weekly

This realistic story follows a day in the life of a young Afghani refugee who takes solace in the beautiful carpets he weaves. In a recurring nightmare, the boy narrator flees with his mother and younger sister, Maha, from the bomber planes that killed his father, then awakes to find himself in a safe but impoverished camp. At dawn, a muezzin calls him to prayer; he then attends school, followed by another call to prayer and finally goes off to his long-awaited practice of carpet weaving. For him, weaving is a skill that ensures "my family will never go hungry" and an outlet that allows him to create a world of color and beauty ("Everything in camp is a dirty brown, so I do not use brown anywhere in my carpets"). When Maha is injured by a truck, the boy must set aside his weaving to come to his family's aid. Khan hints at the boy's powerful emotions in spare prose, and handles her difficult subject matter sensitively. Himler (Fly Away Home) paints the family with dignity and warmth, enveloping them in earth-colored, rosy tones and the details of daily life. Readers will appreciate the candor of author and artist in their depiction of refugee life and the family's hope in the midst of such conflict; however, they will need an adult's help to explain some of its larger themes. Ages 5-8.

From School Library Journal

Grade 2-3-A young Afghan describes his grim life in the refugee camp where he lives with his mother and younger sister. Their food is bread and water or tea; their hut is made of mud. His father was killed in the war while plowing the field. The child's only joy is learning to weave carpets, into which he incorporates intricate rose patterns. One day his sister is hit by a truck. That night, after learning that she will survive, he dreams of jets crossing the sky and dropping bombs, but unlike his earlier nightmares of suffering a direct hit, he now dreams that the three find a space "the size of a carpet" where no bombs can strike. Within the space are roses. The restrained watercolor illustrations skillfully convey both the physical setting and emotional impact of the story. However, the plot is thin, the text is somewhat flat, and young readers will long for more details about this boy's life. The book's best use may be by teachers, pairing it with Florence Parry Heide's more richly woven Sami and the Time of the Troubles (Clarion, 1992).

Joseph Carter:

As a scholar exactly feel bored to reading. If their teacher requested them to go to the library or to make summary for some publication, they are complained. Just very little students that has reading's soul or real their interest. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to go to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading significantly. Any students feel that reading through is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this time, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this The Roses in My Carpets can make you really feel more interested to read.
